

NEWSPAPER

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1837.

The Press, through which the news reaches us from Canada, is completely divided upon the question of the merits of the present contest in the Provinces... This cause of the Revolutionists is cried up by some of the papers, as the cause of liberty and as glorious as that in which... at Baltimore, in '76. Others regard it as an unnatural rebellion against mild laws and a liberal government, got up by selfish leaders, for the sole gratification of selfish ends. The accounts are therefore varied and colored and exaggerated, according to the varying sentiments of those by whom they are given. We shall extract from the different papers, by a comparison of which, making allowances for partialities, we may arrive at tolerably correct information of the result of things in the coming engagements.

[From the N. Y. Commercial.]
 We have the Montreal Herald of Saturday morning, and fire information through other channels. That on which we place most reliance is obtained from a gentleman who left Montreal at 9 o'clock on Saturday morning and who assures us that confidence was at that time very much restored, the general opinion being that the spirit as well as the power of the insurgents had received so severe a check at St. Charles, as would reduce them far below even on a parity with the loyalists, strengthened as the latter will soon be, by the large force coming from upper Canada. We learn that Mr. C. Chervin, and Mr. Toussaint Peltier, were arrested on the 1st instant, for high treason. These are parties of more note than most of those heretofore arrested.

As was to be expected, a number of foreign military men have gone to Canada, as spectators of, and some perhaps desirous to take part in, the military operations there in progress. Among the number, we have heard of some 20 English officers on half pay, Captain Maryatt, John Hackett, (going, if not gone), the Duke of Albion, Chevalier Paul, and M de Zollander, the last three French gentlemen of distinction. We learn that 2000 pairs of snow shoes have been purchased by the government in Lower Canada, to insure the efficiency of the troops during the winter.

When one of our intelligible left intimates on Saturday night, intelligence had been received that the insurgents were assembling in considerable numbers at St. Charles, on the Chambly or Richelieu river. It was known at once that from two to three hundred had assembled at St. Pauline—it was therefore deemed advisable to dispatch a force to that place. For our own part we are strongly inclined to believe that Mr. Papineau is not acting with the insurgents; but that if he is with them at all, it is as a sort of prisoner; that he is an insurgent under duress. We will give our reasons for this opinion to-morrow.

[From the Montreal Courier.]

"It is impossible to anticipate the professed humane vagaries of a French Legislature or Frenchified Executive. But whatever may be their opinions and intentions on the subject, the humanity requires that a TERRIBLE EXAMPLE be made of EVERY CONVICTED TRAITOR of substance and station, and that MERCY, whether the shape of pardon or mitigation of punishment, be refused to none but the poor and insipid crew.

"Special commission ought to be immediately issued for the trial of the present batch of UNREHABILITATED TRAITORS. It would be ridiculous to FATTEN FELLOWS all winter for THE GAME LAW."

[From the Correspondent of the N. Y. Courier.]

Wetherall's victory was much more complete than has been reported; the carnage was great that it has not been published. The men, contents of at least 500 men, by shot, fire and water. They fought very well until they were charged by the bayonet, and then the butcher was doubtful. Upwards of 100 men were killed, and upwards of 100 men were killed. Many attempted to cross the river and were drowned. Brown's carpet bag, with one cloth shirt and one pair of stockings, has been recovered, and is now in the hands of the many. They are in great spirits, and full of military ardor, at Montreal. The volunteers are very assiduous in their duties, and every gentleman in the city carries his musket.

[From the New York Express.]

The packets ill-timed; and the news of erty from the Canades, we presume, will considered in England of the highest importance. If we thought our feeble voice could be heard in our Father's land, we would most gratefully say that Lower Canada cannot governed by bloodshed and violence, that nothing which England can do to arrest or diminish human blood, excepting what she cannot be governed to — or, if not make us her a treaty of reciprocity, and take all the advantages of her trade. The great power of British Empire, it may be, is powerful enough to make an unwilling subject and a slave of any Canadian; but we have seen what has been done by the English at New Orleans, and especially at the capture of the English ships, and British Gulf ships are permitted to go to the West Indies, where they are treated as slaves of the United States. We have seen the American Government should never be in such a situation as to oppress.

AN UNEXPECTED WHIG TRIUMPH IN OHIO.—An election for Representative to Congress, in the District formerly represented by Mr. Loouis (he ~~has~~ resigned) took place here, the 1st of the month. The Loco Foco majority in this District was 500; at the last election. So completely hopeless seemed the prospect of the Whigs, that it was not until a day or two before the election that they put a candidate into the field. Mr. Coffin, the Whig candidate, got the correspondents of the New York papers, is elected by a handsome majority!

[Correspondence of the N.-Y. Express.]
 Washington, Dec. 31st

Both Houses came together at 12 o'clock. A joint resolution was adopted for electing a Chaplain to the House of Representatives. Two thousand copies of the Report of the Secretary of the Treasury were ordered to be printed. Several resolutions were laid upon the table for future consideration, and among them one relating into the causes of the delay of the vessels of the South Sea Expedition. The Resolution for fixing a day for the appointment of the regular standing Committee was postponed until to-morrow. Mr. Underwood's amendment to one of the rules of the House, making it necessary to compile the year and days in such a manner that every 100th year in the United States shall have one copy furnished them through the Executive of each State.

A resolution was then introduced by Mr. Underwood, calling upon the Secretary of War for full and complete information in regard to the expenses of the Florida war, the character of the troops, the manner of conducting the war, and for information upon all subjects relating to the Seminole war, from the commencement up to the present time. The resolution was introduced by Mr. Underwood on Monday and was adopted to-day.

Several minor reports from the departments, were then received, laid upon the table and ordered to be printed.
— The House was in session less than an hour and did no business of importance. Nothing will be done before the holidays are over, and business may commence by the beginning of the coming year I presume not before.
The Senate were in session but a half hour. A few minor reports were read from the departments.

P. S. Among the resolutions laid upon the table this morning, was one by Mr. Snyder, of Illinois, which is to be the ground-work of a most endless discussion. It urges direct vote upon the bill passed at the extra session of Congress, for the postponement of the payment of the fourth instalment of the Surplus Revenue, and proposes that that bill be at once repealed and the money paid according to the Depository Act passed during the session of the last Congress.

Mr Snyder was elected in Congress as a Administration man, but like his two colleagues he preferred to serve God and his country man and mankind. He belongs to the Conservative party proper, and not like many of the Conservative members of the House, a self-styled Conservative party reformer. His resolution when fairly before the House, will carry it was back to Africa to equal the services and to the tents of the ablest political soldiers in the rank and give life and spirit to the debates of the session. The resolution will be laid before the House as speedily as possible, and before discussion closes it will prove a Pandora's box to the Administration.

FROM TEXAS. The New Orleans Commercial (Lr.) gives a deplorable account of the condition of Texas, communicated by gentleman recently from Houston. "The article says, in being handed, and will shortly be published, that the hands of discharged soldiers are running over the country, without employment or the means of obtaining subsistence; that in the event of an intrusion of the Indians or Mexicans, the country must depend on regular enterprise for its defence; and that regular communication with the interior is cut off, in consequence of the want of money to pay the mail contractors. The want of the President, though slowly improving, is still very delicate. Gen. Lamar arrived in Houston the evening our informant left."

Notwithstanding the discouraging state of affairs, a great number of emigrants were pouring into the country.

Mexican papers, received at New Orleans contain the annual report of the minister of finances, laid before Congress, sitting in Mexico, on the 15th of October last. This statement shows a considerable reduction of the revenue when compared with that of the preceding year. The custom houses throughout the whole nation, produced less than six millions of dollars.

Iron STEAM BOATS. An iron steamboat, called the SIRINA, was launched on the 26th ult. at the Isle of Dogs, the longest yet made of 181 she measures about 164 feet in the keel, 178 on deck. — H. & Co. has built two high speed machines of thirty five horse power each, with mean cylinder of 3.13 feet stroke, and the pistons with copper tubes worked expansively and to play on the Rhone. The iron plant which she is made are about seven feet in thickness, and her ribs are of double angle iron diagonal stays. Her mould is handsome, rather narrow, and when she has her machinery and water, it is calculated she will not above two feet water. She is, besides, six feet in draught.

THE BLIND-BLIND. A very curious and happy accident has occurred at the Theatre Royal, (Railway Magazine.

SPECULATION SPOILS: The sudden closing last week closed the cattle so abruptly about half a score of boats' loads with business fastened to our village, and as predicted for the winter. Men were doing things occur than outsiders began to make a great deal of speculation. Each—rearing its principal source of income to be in the way and says: "We very there at which they took in storage and some war wares; partly of the business of what warehouses; it was a lot of it." I saw a couple of men

FRIDAY, Dec. 8th.

John Jeffreys was sentenced to a fine of $1 and costs on conviction for an assault and battery.

Nehemiah Griffin, a german of color, was brought in by the City Marshal, charged with stealing a pair of shoes, the property of Nether-ess & Rich. Pleaded not guilty... Adjudged guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of five dollars and be imprisoned twenty days in the county goal. Committed.

The Eastern Argus states that, Valentine Cook of Boston, choked to death while eating his supper at Mr. Philbrick's Tavern in Sidney, on the 19th ult. On making an incision into his throat near the root of the tongue a large piece of beef steak, three inches long, one and a half wide, and half of an inch thick, was discovered, and in such a situation as to form a complete valve over the passage of the lungs and stomach. [Boston Centinel.]

THE WEATHER AT WASHINGTON: For the last week we have had unusually mild weather, clear, overcast, and even warm at times, have been, by many persons, laid aside, as intolerable. Ladies promenaded the streets with parasols up, and gentlemen wearing bombazet the 1st and 2d December. [Not lot]

HUMPHRIES FAREWELL ADDRESS - The Grand Theatre, (says the London Observer of Oct 15th) closed a highly successful season on Thursday evening, with the never-tiring Sage and Weller, immediately after the performance of which, Humphries stepped forward and delivered the following humorous Farewell Address (written by Moncrieff, in character :

power to make things comfortable—as the bridge did when he put the cobblers' legs in the stocks." Our horse certainly is raggy there, but then, as the maggot said when he got into the harness, "it's werry snug; and we're never a bit out of the groove." And if you or I would like to see what a good time the boys and girls at the entertainments have happened to be spending, the dressing, you see, can only say, "the gentleman said you his horse's eye was out, it wasn't our fault, but our misfortune."

"During the time we shall stop, the Governor means to put a horse in the improvement that you may find there is still more at hand for, like the other MK's, we hope to see you again at Easter Monday. Of course I must go, but I shall be sure to wait on you at the place has been made so werry agreeable, that all my work's bin but playing; and whatever payment I may get in a longer house shall be for the horse to gain, forgetting old times here, for, after all, home's home, it's a very homely, for the cricket, sung in the club operations. The town has already commenced operations; he's engaged two or three livery corks to provide the bill of fare; and in order to prevent brookages, means to follow the wice of the bill in the chantry stall, and it's werry sharp after the pieces.

And now having said these words he then said I've only to return you all our warmest thanks for your kindness; and to wish you all good health and prosperity, till we see you again. The telephone said to the organ yet they insist on out of the observatory.

AN ENGLISH FAULT. The devices by which wealthy Englishmen labor to get rid of their incomes, are sometimes amusing enough. One of the latest English papers brings an account of which had something new in it. An Englishman recently obtained permission to occupy one of the houses exhibited at Pompeii for a fortnight. Before going into his premises, he had the building to be completely restored as near to its original state as could be done, and then dressing his family and his servants in the ancient Roman dress, imitated their mode of living, and made the Latin classic his sole reading.

A gentleman who had a snuff box that played "Drops of Brandy," and "The glasses pass on the board," went to dine with a friend a few miles out of town, one Sunday, taking his snuff box in his pocket. He accompanied the family to the parish church, and by some accidental means about the middle of the service, he touched the spring of the box, which struck "Drops of Brandy," most ingeniously. Every eye and every ear was directed to the spot, but great dismay of the gentleman, who did not wish to stop the box, but in doing so he only contrived to change the tune, on which he hesitated for a clench, the box rattling away while he rubbed along the spring.

VERSE. Verse is like a pair of skates, which a man can fly lightly over the shining surface of the ideal, but stumbles heavily on an ordinary road.

FEELING AND REASON. Feelings are guides only when the sky is clear, but reason is the rattle, which side as when the latter is obscured.

SYMPATHY WITH DELICATE FEELINGS. display of delicate feelings provokes contempt in some minds; as the same music inspires the nightingale, sets the dogs to baying.

NIGHT. Night and shadow seem more palpable, more like substances, than the light. W. L. G. says I believe, and a thousand say so.

CONVERSATION. Some men are dispo-when played oh singly; others draine, goodly in a band:

EARTHLY PLEASURES. There dwells in my soul, a passionate longing for a better world, which I feel to be a huge but earthly pleasure the world in India put snakes in the way for freedom, but now given to heart, and it perishes, with its feverish unvisited.

The recent death of Mr. Philip Francis, only son of Sir Philip Francis, K. G. R., very probably has thrown new lights relating to the authorship of the letters of Lord Sandwich. It is known that he has his house in the Strand, near the Strand Palace, and close to the Strand Palace, and that he is a member of the House of Commons. His collection of political pamphlets, published at the same time, when James O'Connell was in the Public Advertiser, was illustrated with manuscript notes, belonging to the persons who figured in the most remarkable episodes of the revolution. The most interesting of these notes were the copy of three memorable epistles, bound in vellum by Henry Savin, now at the Strand, and in his library, in manuscript, a history of the period in which he lived, containing biographical sketches of the eminent statesmen of his own times. This work would undoubtedly be most interesting at the present day.

[Morning Herald.]

BRIDGE: Among all the stupendous works of nature, not a place can be selected more fitted for the exhibition of Almighty power. I have stood upon the summit of the giant Elins, and looking over the clouds floating beneath my feet, at the bold scenery of Sily, and the distant mountains of Calabrian; upon the top of Vesuvius, and looked down upon the waves of the lava, and the ruined and half-recovered cities at its foot; and they are nothing compared with the terrific solitudes and bleak majesty of Sinai. An observing traveller has well called it a "cataclysm of desolation." Not a trace of shrub or blade of grass is to be seen on the bare and rugged sides of limestone mountains heavily strewn with naked unnumbered rocks, while the crumbling masses of granite all around, and the distant view of the Syrian desert, with its boundless waste of sand, from the wildest and most dreary that imagination can conceive. The level surface of the very top, or pinnacle, is about six leagues. At one end is a single rock, about twenty feet high, on which, said the monks, the Spirit of God descended, while in the cleft beneath his favored servant received the tables of the law. The ruins of the church and convent are still to be seen upon the mountain, which, before the convent below was built, monks and hermits used to retire, and secluded from the world, sing the praises of God upon his chosen hill. Near this, also, in ruins, stands a Mohammedan mosque, for on this sacred spot the followers of Christ and Mohammed have united in worshipping the true and living God. Under the canopy is a hermit's cell, where, from the iron age of fanaticism, the ascetic has spent out his days in fasting, meditation and prayer.

(Incidents of travels in Egypt.)

PEOPLE OF THE BRITISH ISLES travel about four years ago in a remote district in Bengal and I came to the house of a gentleman belonging to Portugal. I found him reading Scriptures in the Bengalee to seventy or eighty people, men, women, and children of a country, who were all very attentive. The gentleman told me that he had been led to copy some of his beloved Scriptures in this way. "And to-morrow," said he, as you pass my way mention my name and they will procure you books, and you will then see the effects of reading the Scriptures." The next day I called on his estate where I saw one hundred men, women, and children who had all become converted to Christianity within three or four years. I inquired how they found themselves; they appeared delighted, and thought it a happy day for them that Europeans had translated Scriptures that they may read, and their tongues the wonderful works of God. I was also introduced into an official person who was a native of the country, and he said that distinct, and I mentioned that because of persons tell you that nothing is done by missionaries. I asked the Magistrate what the conduct of the Christians, and he said, "There is something in them that does excite the inhabitants of this district particularly known as being so huggous troublesome, that they have scarcely any other but what they bring into the court of justice. But during three or four years not one of these people have brought a case against one, or any against them." I mention this to show that Christianity will produce in all countries, peace and happiness, to those who know the truth as it is in Jesus. (Lent. Col. Ph.

WOMEN AND MATRIMONY. [From Mrs. H. W. P. novel, "Uncle Horace."] Most women possess a talent, and by no means an unproductive one, for matrimony. At first, with common-sense girls, it evaporates in flirtations, which do not do, they sink into the sentimentality of poetry, and catch vulgar colds in their heads by "saying the moon," though it can help it, but in "squeaking" and "tittering" they know the secret, and will continue thirty, but get no speaking, indeed some persons are kinder at that antiquated mode of conversation, they become geologists, or conchologists, or moralists, or sectarians, or anything rationalist. An unmarried lady feels her despotically circumstanced, between thirty and forty she does not consider any of the two the creation either too young or too old to do with at all, and should be especially aware by actors as well as majors - she grows suddenly dangerous when nearing forty, then when once that awful number is past, it is known the most indelicate husband-hunter will throw up her forlorn hope, and become, amongst men, a tolerably safe and a very agreeable companion. There are exceptions: Miss Maxwell was one certainly; for she lived on, until hunted down by death!
